front glass
Posted by ashes - 17 Nov 2012 20:32

I'm very happy with my PC 45 but have one question the front glass has a lot of ash that sticks to it not that big of a deal just would like for it to stay cleaner for viewing. any ideas?

==========

Re: front glass
Posted by tfgrower - 17 Nov 2012 22:23

Ashes I use Rutlands White Off Product 565. After using alot of different things this is the best I've found. The more elbow grease the better. I put a good coat on and rub vigerously until it's gone and polish with clean paper towel. Took off stuff that was years old.

==========

Re: front glass
Posted by FirepotPete - 18 Nov 2012 16:20

---

tfgrower wrote:

Ashes I use Rutlands White Off Product 565. After using alot of different things this is the best I've found. The more elbow grease the better. I put a good coat on and rub vigerously until it's gone and polish with clean paper towel. Took off stuff that was years old.

I use the same product, works great. Clean off as much as you can just with paper towels and water, then use the white off.

Some won't like this but.....I also use 0000 steel wool with the white off on stubborn spots. I've used it for years and never has caused any scratching on my glass. Maybe some glass is different but for mine it's worked great with out scratching.

==========

Re: front glass
Posted by Nogas - 20 Nov 2012 00:59

My 7 year old granddaughter (when she was 6) was playing with a plastic pom-pom in front of the stove. When I looked up, I thought the glass shattered, only to discover she got too close and touched it to the glass. What a scare! But a little goo off and a lot of scraping with a puddy knife got most of it off.

I get the top half of the glass covered in dust after a days worth of burning pellets. When the stove is cool, I use some of the ash with a damp paper towel to clean, then use a clean damp one, then a dry one, clear as a bell.

==========

Re: front glass

Posted by jaydub - 22 Nov 2012 13:40

_____

I was using straight bleach on a rag..it works if you dont mind the fumes (Which they say are not good for you) what is..? I switched to Speedy White Hearth and stove cleaner..It works pretty good..hey its Biodegradable Like that matters to me..!

==========