New Here
Posted by George Tucker - 10 Dec 2012 02:11

I am new here, hope to give information and receive same. I am Retired and have time now to tinker in my Shop, this is a nice forum, George.

==========

Re: New Here
Posted by kappel15 - 10 Dec 2012 02:20

Hi George, and welcome to the forum. Lots of good folks, and lots of good info in here. Kap

==========

Re: New Here
Posted by tfgrower - 10 Dec 2012 02:24

Welcome George

==========

Re: New Here
Posted by command_z - 10 Dec 2012 02:57

Always nice to have new people with new ideas. Welcome!

==========

Re: New Here
Posted by FirepotPete - 10 Dec 2012 18:18

Welcome George. Retired, YES, and time to tinker, YES. Living my dream for me hey!

More people more ideas, always a good thing.

Enjoy your retirement and tinkering, I'll be joining you (hopefully) in 8 years. This is worse than waiting to turn 16 and get a drivers license.

==========

Re: New Here

Posted by Corny - 10 Dec 2012 21:23

_____

Welcome aboard, George! Looking to hear more from you on your tinkerings. Perhaps you could let us know what type of stove you have and how you handle your fuel?

Myself, I'm burning corn stored in a covered gravity wagon. I'm on my 8th heating season. I use a 6 hp shop vac to pull directly from the wagon to a storage tank on the front porch from where we hoof by bucket to the stove. Corn is cleaned at various steps of the operation. Here is where it is described on the old forum.

forum.iburncorn.com/viewtopic.php?t=6345

Btw, that old forum makes good fireside reading, if you haven't discovered it yet.

==========