I bought a 115
Posted by cardoctork - 21 Dec 2012 01:58

Well I took a chance and bought a 115 with the exhaust pipe. Anything I should do when moving it and hooking back up? Also can I hook a remote thermostat up?

==========

Re: I bought a 115
Posted by blume98 - 21 Dec 2012 02:54

---

throw out pipe unless it is good , check for holes, you can do a thermostat, not sure what you are using, take out jumper on thermostate block hook up thermostat to those terminals

bixby piping is notorious for trouble

==========

Re: I bought a 115
Posted by jawquin - 22 Dec 2012 14:28

Good luck with your 115. Absolutely hook a thermostat up to it. Plenty of info on this site to make it work.

==========

Re: I bought a 115
Posted by cardoctork - 02 Jan 2013 01:58

I got the stove home tonight. Looks to be in good shape very clean has only burnt wood pellets.Pipe all looks like new. It does look like there is some soot on the air intake of the cap like it pulled exhaust back in the air intake? Anything I should look for before installing?

==========

Re: I bought a 115
Posted by Corny - 02 Jan 2013 04:05

Congrats, Cardo.

To confirm prior soot intake, remove the ash drawer and check for soot inside the large flex hose in the back. Either way, not much you can do about it now except ensure that you have proper exhaust connections.

Enjoy your stove.

==========

Re: I bought a 115
Posted by blume98 - 02 Jan 2013 13:21

---

throw the end cap away, add 1 to 1 1/2 ft to 3 inch let it blow

==========

Re: I bought a 115
Posted by Corny - 02 Jan 2013 14:32

Scroll down from here to see pics of "stretch cap" designs, including Blume's winner. All of these designs provide greater separation of exhaust and intake air.

forum.iburncorn.com/wiki/index.php/BixbyFAQ#Venting

==========

Re: I bought a 115
Posted by cardoctork - 04 Jan 2013 01:40

Ok so can I put the exhaust straight out the wall? I dont have to come out and go up?

==========

Re: I bought a 115
Posted by Corny - 04 Jan 2013 03:26

Yes, go short and straight if you can. The stove is certified for straight-out configuration. See the manual, available here:

forum.iburncorn.com/wiki/index.php/Bixby#Manuals_and_Guides

==========

Re: I bought a 115
Posted by Corny - 04 Jan 2013 03:31

---

jawquin wrote:

Good luck with your 115. Absolutely hook a thermostat up to it. Plenty of info on this site to make it work.

And I agree with Jawquin. Here's info on hooking up t-stat:

forum.iburncorn.com/wiki/index.php/Bixby...6_AutoStart_on.2Foff

==========